

Ian Morris

Televisions Editor, CNET UK

Ian Morris has been on the Internet for so long he is frequently mistaken for part of the furniture.

He is passionate about technology, a love that began when, during middle school, he took a rotary dial telephone apart. From then on no electrical item was safe from his attempts to 'fix' it, and it wasn't long before he realised that taking things apart generally resulted in their destruction.

Ian's long-running obsession with televisions began in the heady days of cathode ray tubes and VHS. Now he is perched on the edge of his seat waiting to see the outcome of the latest format wars, including plasma versus LCD and HD DVD versus Blu-Ray skirmishes.
